- Accenture, which describes itself as a global management consulting, technology services and outsourcing company, spent $198,000 from 2003-2004 lobbying in New York State. They have hired the firms of Patricia Lynch Associates Inc. and Hiffa Ostroff & Associates, Inc. While they have not reported lobbying on HAVA issues in NY, the NY Times reports that they have assembled the voter registration database for Florida and are currently preparing one for Pennsylvania. The Times also reports (3/29/04) that Accenture is a "generous donor to both parties, although it gives about twice as much money to Republicans as Democrats." In the 2002 and 2004 election cycles, Accenture donated $10,000 to NY Republicans in the U.S. Congress, while only giving $2,000 to NY Democrats. (Center for Responsive Politics)

- Diebold Election Systems, owned by Diebold Incorporated, is one of the leading voting machine vendors across the country. The company has been the focus of a national debate about the role partisan politics should play in the voting machine selection process. Walden O'Dell, Chairman, President and CEO of Diebold Inc., is a Pioneer for President Bush's reelection campaign, and has hosted a fundraiser with Vice President Cheney that netted $500,000. (Atlanta Journal Constitution 12/6/03) Diebold Inc. and Mr. O'Dell gave $100,965 in soft money to the Republican Party during the 2002 election cycle on the national level. Diebold Inc.'s executives and employees have given $63,290 in campaign contributions at the federal level since 1999, all but $4,775 was donated to Republican candidates and committees. (Center for Responsive Politics) Chairman and CEO of Diebold Inc., Walden O'Dell, rang the closing bell at the New York Stock Exchange on August 27, 2003. O'Dell also stated he is committed to "helping Ohio deliver its electoral votes to the President next year." (N.Y. Times 12/2/03)
